

SHARING FROM GRANDPARENTS -1

- The grain says, “you keep me in the grain, I keep you in the human.”
- If we waste the goodness of others, our own goodness is wasted. We get what we sow. This rule applies for emotions also.
- If we have wrong thoughts about someone without any reason, they will also have the same feelings about us.
- Some people live happily until the end of their lives, while others fight. It depend on attitude and bonding of deed.
- There is no need to fight for happiness.
- When people miss us in their life, it is our success as human.
- To take care of a person who is weaker than us is our duty by nature.
- To give grain and water to birds is our moral responsibility as we encroached their only home for our second home by cutting the trees and closing the small natural ponds.
- All the souls are equally important for God; it may belong to elephant or an ant.
- Always be prepared and ready to complete your wish as chance never knock the door.